

HUMAN TRAFFICKING AWARENESS

July 30 marks the World Day Against Trafficking in Persons, proclaimed by the United Nations.

TeamHealth stands with human trafficking survivors today and every day. Our clinicians are trained to spot warning signs and are a resource for survivors to share their experiences so that we can create safer environments.

More than 80% of recovered victims say that they were seen in a medical setting while being trafficked and it wasn't recognized, and they weren't recovered.

How Can Hospitals and Clinicians Help?

Hospitals need a robust list of up-to-date resources.

Each department, in the same way you take time to learn the latest treatments, should take the time to have the most current information on how to help survivors.

Alice Jay
Human Trafficking Survivor
Founder of Sister Survivor National Connect

Be connected to places where they can get food, clothing, housing, and shelter. Have those lists. And then go a step further to make sure the places you're telling them about actually do what they say they do.

Dr. Jaime Hope
Emergency Medicine Physician
Beaumont Hospital